Welcome to Holland

I am often asked to describe the experience of raising a child with a disability—to try to help people who have not shared this unique experience to understand it, to imagine how it would feel. It’s like this…

When you’re going to have a baby, it’s like planning a fabulous vacation trip—to Italy. You buy a bunch of guide books and make your wonderful plans. The Coliseum. Michelangelo’s David. The gondolas in Venice. You may even learn some handy phrases in Italian. It’s all very exciting.

After months of eager anticipation, the day finally arrives. You pack your bags and off you go. Several hours later the plane lands. The stewardess comes in and says, “Welcome to Holland!” “Holland?” you say. “What do you mean Holland? I signed up for Italy. I’m supposed to be in Italy. All my life I’ve dreamed of going to Italy!” But there has been a change in the flight plan. They have landed in Holland and there you must stay.

The important thing is that they haven’t taken you to a horrible, disgusting, filthy place full of pestilence, famine, and disease. It’s just a different place.

So you must go out and buy new guide books. And you must learn a whole new language. And you will meet a whole new group of people you would never have met.

It’s just a different place. It’s slower-paced than Italy, less flashy than Italy. But after you’ve been there for a while and you catch your breath, you look around... And you begin to notice that Holland has windmills... and Holland has tulips. Holland even has Rembrandts.

But everyone you know is busy coming and going from Italy and they’re all bragging about what a wonderful time they had there. And for the rest of your life, you will say, “Yes, that’s where I was supposed to go. That’s what I had planned.” And the pain of that will never, ever, ever go away... because the loss of that dream is a very significant loss. But... if you spend your life mourning that fact that you didn’t get to Italy, you may never be free to enjoy the very special—the very lovely things about Holland.

Emily Perl Kingsley
Parent of a child with a disability
Hello and Welcome!

When you learned that you were expecting a baby, you probably felt a sense of wonder and excitement as you and your family planned and dreamed about your new arrival. When your child was born with a disability or you learned that your child has delays in his or her development, your expectations and dreams seemed to be shattered. Feelings of disappointment, sadness, guilt, anger, and fear replaced expected feelings of joy and promise. These emotions are normal.

Now, you may be feeling concern over the challenges your child might face. You may worry about how others see your child and whether he or she will have friends and opportunities in life that other children without disabilities experience. You may also question your ability as a parent to help your child learn and succeed in the world.

Most families soon come to recognize that they are their child’s first and forever teacher. You know and understand your child better than anyone else, which makes you the expert on your child’s abilities. You know best how to make your child an important part of your family and what he or she will need to become a happy, contributing member of our community.

Fortunately, you do not have to do this alone. In Spokane County, there are many excellent resources and supports, also known as early intervention services, to help you and your child grow and learn together. It is our hope that this booklet will provide you with the encouragement and assistance you are seeking for yourself, your child, and your family.

What is Early Intervention?
Early intervention is the “name” for the developmental help your child will get while he or she is young. Early intervention is for children ages birth to three who have been diagnosed with a developmental delay or disability. The purpose of early intervention is to help your child make as much progress as possible during the years when their brain is growing the most. Some children who get early intervention services will outgrow the need for special help by the time they enter school.

Early Intervention Services
Early Intervention Services are provided to your child in many different ways. Once it is determined what services your child needs, you will be assigned a Family Resource Coordinator (FRC). You will work closely with your FRC, and they will help you look at all of your options. Some service providers work in the same location, so you only need to go to one place to get a variety of services. Some providers work out of an office, and you take your child there for regular appointments. Other providers come to your home to provide services to your child and family. Don’t worry about making the wrong choice, because you can always change if your first choice doesn’t work out.

Family Involvement
You play an important role in the decision surrounding your child’s care. You will find that service providers want to include you in the decision-making process. You will help decide which services your child will receive, who will provide those services, and where those services will be located. It is important for you to remember that you are the real expert on your child and family. Your opinion is very important, so don’t be afraid to speak up.

Your Family’s Culture
Early Intervention Service providers know that each family has its own beliefs, customs, and traditions. They also know that you will have an idea about the best way for your family to participate in services. This is why early intervention service plans are different for each family. And why providers work to meet your child and family’s unique needs. When Early Intervention Services meet your family’s unique needs, it is called individualized services or family-centered services.

Working Together
Keeping track of all the different community agencies and service providers can sometimes be complicated. Fortunately, the Spokane County Interagency Coordinating Council (CICC) meets at least four times a year. They meet to look for ways to improve early intervention services. Families are important in this process. When you let the CICC know how services are going for your child, then they are able to look at the quality and effectiveness of the services they provide. The CICC always welcomes families to attend meetings to express their concerns or to learn about what is happening in the community. If you are interested in more information about the CICC and how to participate, just let your FRC know.
Where Do I Start?

If you have a child under the age of three who has been diagnosed with a developmental disability or you are worried about your child’s development, you may call (509) 324-1651, at the Infant Toddler Network (ITN). A Family Resource Coordinator (FRC) will interview you and assist you in obtaining a developmental screening or evaluation for your child.

An evaluation is the first step in determining whether or not your child qualifies for any services.

In order to receive services funded through the Spokane County Community Services, Housing, and Community Development Department (CSHCD), a child must first be eligible through the Developmental Disabilities Administration (DDA). Eligibility for DDA services is not based on income and is determined by the presence of a developmental delay in one or more of the following developmental areas:

- Fine or gross motor skills—reaching, grasping, sitting, walking, moving, etc.
- Self-help skills—feeding, dressing, toileting, etc.
- Expressive and receptive language skills—talking, responding to words, etc.
- Social skills—making eye contact, relating to others, etc.
- Cognitive or problem solving skills—ability to learn.

Children who have Down syndrome, have medically intensive needs, or who have a condition that is too complicated to be assessed are also eligible for services.

Your FRC can assist you in filling out the application forms for DDA. If you do not know if your child is eligible for services under DDA, you may call DDA at (509) 329-2900, and an intake person will ask you some questions about your child’s medical history and development over the phone. If your child qualifies, a DDA Case Manager will be assigned to your child and family.

Early Intervention Services Agencies that Contract with Spokane County

If your child is eligible for DDA services, you may be able to receive services funded through Spokane County Community Services Department’s Developmental Disabilities Division. These services are provided through contracts with the following three early intervention providers:

1) Children FIRST
2) Early Head Start
3) Joya

Each agency has provided a description of their program and early intervention services offered through their program. Their services are available to support both your child and your family.
Children FIRST Therapy provides the highest-quality early intervention services for children birth to three with developmental delays through our unique, integrated preschool and group therapy programs. Our integrated preschool provides an opportunity for children to learn from and receive therapy with their typically-developing friends rather than attending an individual session in a more subdued clinical environment.

For more than 20, years Children FIRST Therapy has been the only therapy program in the Spokane area offering an integrated preschool run by therapists who skillfully engage your child in their therapy work during their preschool activities and learning.

Children FIRST Therapy is also a high-quality, successful preschool for typically developing children. In our program, therapists and early childhood specialists teach children with developmental disabilities and typically developing children the same curriculum which challenges each student to grow and reach their own fullest potential.

Children FIRST Therapy serves the child’s parents and care-givers as well; offering in-depth resource coordination and hands-on involvement in the child’s therapy. We also provide in-home therapy sessions for children within our service area.

For children in East, West, and Central Valley school districts, as well as the Spokane area, Children First Therapy is the only integrated preschool and the best choice for your child’s success!
Early Head Start

Early Head Start (EHS) is a program of the Community Colleges of Spokane’s Institute for Extended Learning. Early Head Start is a federally-funded program designed to foster healthy development for low income children, prenatal to age three, and their families. It promotes healthy prenatal outcomes, enhances the development of infants and toddlers, and promotes healthy family functioning. Spokane County Early Head Start serves 210 children and their families.

The program models include home-base, part-day, and full-day center base services. The EHS center base staff includes a teacher, an associate teacher, and family service coordinator. Home visitors serve home base children on a weekly basis. In addition, education staff oversees group socializations.

As a comprehensive program, EHS helps families address the many areas of a child’s growth and development. Programming for each child is individualized based on their strengths and needs. EHS provides health screenings and works with families to access health care providers, and a registered dietitian is on staff to support family nutrition services. The program supports a wellness approach to family and child mental health, with onsite mental health consultants available to children, staff, and families.

Parent involvement and the social services component are critical elements of EHS services. The parent’s role in their child’s education, growth and development, as well as the parents participation in program governance, is one of the unique strengths of Early Head Start programming.

Early Head Start provides a natural environment for children with identified disabilities as they participate in the program. Ten percent of all enrollments are reserved for children with special needs. Typically, over 17% of EHS total enrollment is children with diagnosed disabilities. In addition to the services listed above, children with special needs receive individualized services from therapy teams. In collaboration with community partners, a team of contracted therapists complete evaluations and provide ongoing services in children’s homes and centers. EHS works with the Infant Toddler Network (ITN) in completing an Individualized Family Service Plan (IFSP) for each child who qualifies. Activities in the IFSP are integrated into all of the regular programming and done as a routine part of the classroom or home based activities.
We exist because no child should sit on the sidelines of life. Through our early intervention services, children with developmental disabilities and delays are given a chance to grow and reach their full potential.

Joya Child & Family Development started in 1960 as the Spokane Guilds’ School & Neuromuscular Center when the Guilds, a group of caring women, started providing respite care for families of children with developmental disabilities.

In 1979, Joya became the first Neuromuscular Center in Washington east of the Cascades. Prior to that, families had to travel to Seattle for their child to receive a complete developmental assessment. In 2018, Joya was designated a Neurodevelopmental Center of Excellence and remains the only such center recognized by the state in eastern Washington.

Joya provides a comprehensive therapy and education program to children birth to three with developmental disabilities and delays. The brain is quickly developing during this very early age, making this the optimal time to provide intervention therapies to maximize potential, in the least restrictive environment.

Joya’s services include: medical evaluations, physical, occupational and speech/language therapies, special education, and access to a full family support center including pediatric nurses and social workers.

Annually, Joya serves nearly 300 infants and toddlers in Spokane County.

Joya serves children and families who are impacted by developmental disabilities, which may be caused by premature birth, cerebral palsy, Down syndrome, autism, muscular dystrophy, spina bifida, chromosomal deletions, various genetic syndromes, shaken baby syndrome and general delays.

Families can self-refer or be referred by a doctor or other medical professional.

Joya is a non-profit, providing all services regardless of a family’s ability to pay. We rely on philanthropy to ensure our services can remain affordable to families of all income levels.

Questions to Ask

A few questions you may want to ask when choosing the agency that will be providing early intervention to your child:

1) What kind of early intervention services do you provide?
2) How will you include me, as a parent, in my child’s evaluation, treatment planning, and overall services?
3) What kind of education and/or training will you give me so I can help my child?
4) Will you come to my house or my child’s daycare to provide services?
5) What will you expect of me as a parent while my child is receiving services?
6) How will you include other family members in my child’s services?
7) How will you incorporate my family’s cultural beliefs and traditions in my child’s services?
8) How will you measure my child’s progress?
9) How will you keep me informed of my child’s progress?
10) Will my child have opportunities to be around children without developmental delays?
11) Will my child’s treatment goals make sense in his or her daily routines?
12) How will you ensure that my child’s services will meet his or her unique needs?
13) What will happen when my child turns 3?

Transition from Early Intervention Services to Special Education Preschool

Early intervention services are available for your child until he/she is three years old. After your child turns three, they will begin to get services from their local school district. Moving from early intervention services to school district services is called transition. Transitioning to the school district will seem strange. You and your child will meet a lot of new people and go to new places for services. The change can feel a little scary, but your Family Resource Coordinator (FRC) will help make the transition as smooth as possible.

Around the time your child turns 2 1/2 years old, your FRC will start talking to you about the upcoming transition. Your FRC will have you sign a form that will allow them to talk to your school district. Your school district will need to determine if your child still needs special services and may want to do some of their own assessments.

Three months before your child turns three, there will be a transition planning meeting with you, your FRC, and a representative from the school district. At this meeting, a plan will be made that describes what services your child will receive after the transition and where those services will take place. The plan may also include opportunities for you and your child to visit with the new service providers, so you can get to know them and ask them questions. It also gives your child a chance to become familiar with the new places where he/she will get services. You know your child better than anyone at the meeting, so it is important that you be your child’s voice, to assure that the plan will meet your child’s individual needs.

Some of the things you will find that are different with services after your child transitions are:

- You no longer have an FRC to help coordinate services, so it will be important for you to voice your opinion and know your rights.
- Your child will not have an Individual Family Service Plan (IFSP) anymore; he/she will have an Individual Education Program (IEP).
- There will be less of a focus on the family as a whole and more focus on your child as an individual.

“A school system without parents at its foundation is just like a bucket with a hole in it.”

Acronyms

There will be times when you are meeting with a physician or service provider, and they use a group of letters (acronyms) to describe something. In the beginning, these acronyms can be confusing, so always ask them to say the words instead of using the letters. Eventually, you will get used to hearing the acronyms, but until then, here is a list of some of the most frequently-used acronyms. For a description of the definition or agency, you can ask your Family Resource Coordinator (FRC) or go to the Early Support for Infants and Toddlers website: www.del.wa.gov/esit
